Pet Health Care Tips

DID YOU KNOW... Of all dogs and cats two years of age and older, 70%-85% have some degree of periodontal disease.

Brushing your pet's teeth...

Brushing your dog's teeth is easy, and once familiar with the activity, he will look forward to it.

For the first few days, simply hold your pet as you normally do when petting him. For a minute or two, gently stroke the outside of his cheeks with your finger and praise him.

As your pet becomes more comfortable with this activity, place a small amount of dentifrice (veterinary toothpaste) on your fingers and let him sample the flavor. Soon, he will consider it a treat.

Next, introduce your pet to an animal brush. Gently raise his upper lip and against an upper tooth and the adjacent

Gradually increase the number of teeth each day, but go slowly and not beyond comfort level. Build up to approximately

Note: Some cats may also tolerate this procedure.

We Offer Alternatives

Acupuncture and Alternative

We offer acupuncture, homeopathy, and other alternative modalities. These modalities are termed complementary because they are an adjunct or addition to conventional medicines may not work. Acupuncture uses needles to stimulate energy around the body. Among other things, it can alleviate pain associated with arthritis and improve kidney function better in cases of kidney disease.

Therapeutic Laser Treatment

The medical problems that can be treated using the laser can bring fast comfort to your pet. It is a non-invasive treatment that actually stimulates the body to heal from within.
