Pet Health Care Tips

DID YOU KNOW... Of all dogs and cats two years of age and older, 70%-85% have some degree of periodontal disease.

Brushing your pet's teeth...

Brushing your dog's teeth is easy, and once familiar with the activity, he will look forward to it.

For the first few days, simply hold your pet as you normally do when petting him. For a minute or two, rub the outside of his cheeks with your finger.

As your pet becomes more comfortable, apply a small amount of dentifrice (veterinary toothpaste) and let him sample the flavor. Soon, he will be ready for a brush.

Next, introduce your pet to an animal toothbrush. Gently raise his upper lip and press the brush against an upper tooth and the adjoining gum.

Gradually increase the number of teeth brushed each day, but go slowly and not beyond your pet's comfort level. Build up to approximately 10 minutes of brushing each side of your pet's mouth.

Note: Some cats may also tolerate this procedure.

We Offer Alternatives

Acupuncture and Alternative Medicine

We offer acupuncture, homeopathy, and other alternative modalities. These modalities are termed complementary because they are an adjunct or addition to conventional medicine when conventional medicines may not be effective. Acupuncture uses needles to stimulate nerves and move energy around the body. Among other things, the therapy can alleviate pain associated with arthritis and help the kidneys function better in cases of kidney failure.

Therapeutic Laser Treatment

The medical problems that can be treated using the laser can bring fast comfort to your pet. It is a non-invasive treatment that actually stimulates the body to heal from within.
